The Ultimate++ logo on the forum site still links to upp.sourceforge.net. Is that what you want?

Werner

P. S.:
The links on my own web site will be updated soon. I hope, tonight.

Let's keep U++ international.

Even if there are some Russian developers using U++ they all know English or understand it enough to solve their problems. IMO English is a must for every developer (still i don't know it well).

I agree with that. U++ is not so wide used to be localized. If we create ultimatepp.ru why not create ultimatepp.cz and so on for every nation who use U++. This will make some PR for U++ if your site is good enough or maybe just advertising if it's not. IMO the best way to help U++ is to use it and write code for it (may be fix's, improvements, etc.).

Maybe... 10 or 20 Mb. I just want to translate main pages first (like Overview, Example etc.)
I don't want separate forum, not yet. My ICQ: 7514562. Write and we'll discuss some details.

Many programmers in our country don't know nothing about Upp and its advantages. Yes, it will be a some kind of PR. But I'll not get the money using the site.

Yes, let's keep U++ forum and code international. But some pages of main site are static and can be translated.

Actually, U++ is significantly different from all other frameworks. It is of interest to people, who is looking for a nonstandard and elegant way of developing code. U++ is not a secret project for many years. Examples: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Widget_toolkit, http://wiki.wxwidgets.org/WxWidgets_Compared_To_Other_Toolki ts.

Everybody, who was looking for something special like U++, could already find it. Otherwise they should be fine with MFC or WxWidgets.

IMHO the best way to promote U++ is to develop a lot of cool applications using U++.

I think they have not been limited to only a translation into Russian of the main page. Especially if we talk about additional PR. So I guess the correct to the community is to create a bilingual site in Russian plus English. The tool can: write multisiting in Joomla.

By the way, interesting to know through which the engine is made www.ultimatepp.org?

Hello Sergey

www.ultimatepp.org page is made with Ultimate++ .

uppbox/uppweb is the package that:
- Generates all web html from T++ (you can browse it locally)
- Uploads it to web server

Cons
- The generated web is made in html, so it is static (like actual Upp web)

Pros
- It translates T++ to html, so TheIde is the web page editor .
- All pages you do for web page in Russian could be used in TheIDE Help in Russian...

Best regards
Koldo

Great! U++ Style in action!

By the way how to add a Russian version of the documentation in TheIde? And whether it will displayed on the site Ultimatepp.org?

If this works out to build Russian documentation and russian menu in ultimatepp.org then will have to simply redirect ultimatepp.ru to ultimatepp.org!

And for the purposes of PR, to ask the community to actively spread a description of applications created using the U++ with the screenshots (and maybe even source code).

By the way, how to lay out my application in the section Applications?

And there is more hidden stuff inside it

It can generate a raw .pdf with all of it!

I want to open (with more people I hope) a new Bazaar project to get a pdf from T++ docs based on this. I will communicate it this week.

Best regards

I am really happy that this info finally got through (not that I was not advertising it since 2008, when I got it running).

And it is even better - almosty everybody with access to primary svn has rights to change any T++ - that way the content of website is open to anybody interested. You only have to wait till the next day to changes become visible.

Hello Sergey

Quote:How can I insert translate of documentations into site www.ultimatepp.org?
This is incredibly easy (so incredible that this have been repeated some times in Forum). Just add T++ docs in uppweb package and link them to T++ docs that do appear in main web.

Quote:How to insert button to site to switch to russian (if avialable) I think it will be interesting not only for russians...

This is one way. For example you want to put a translated "Overview" page. The steps are:

- Copy original T++ "Overview" page into other called the same but with your language (instead of EN-US)
- Translate it
- Edit the original "Overview" page adding a nice link to your page, like "Russian >>"
- Edit your Russian "Overview" page adding a nice link to the original EN_US page, like "English >>"

Thats all !
Is it not easy ?

Best regards
Koldo

Just a factual comment: Could please start a new thread? It is scary to see "Domains registered, new website should be on within 24 hours" as the last message on the forum (while that post was in 2006...).

Wait until midnight when upp site get synchronized from svn, and after that you may access it from http://www.ultimatepp.org/www$uppweb$overview$ru-ru.html
