Subject: Bazaar packages in U++ web
Posted by koldo on Sat, 12 Dec 2009 19:14:39 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hello all

Thanks to main U++ developers Bazaar contributors have a place in main U++ page to show and document the packages.

Perhaps you have seen in U++ pages a new "Bazaar" button in the left side. It opens a summary of Bazaar contributions and links to their documentation.

If you want to know more about Bazaar packages this is the fastest, simplest way. No need to search in the Forum or compile to know what is a package for.

Something interesting is that linked package documentation in .tpp folders is automatically uploaded to the page. That means that if you change your documentation, the web page will be updated too!

If there is something wrong, for example:
- Your documentation is not linked
I have not found .tpp files
- The documentation is linked, but not the right "summary" topic
I have not found the right .tpp topic that is linked to all the documentation
- There is no author or it is wrong
- Your package is not in the summary

please tell me and I will fix it immediately (the changes will effectively appear the day after)

Remember that if you have some documentation not linked directly or indirectly to the initial .tpp topic linked in http://www.ultimatepp.org/www$uppweb$bazaar$en-us.html, it will not appear in the web !

Best regards
Koldo