I am working on a new implementation of the Socket class to be able to let the core app handle sending and receiving data using callbacks so you could use the socket like a stream, just push some data into it and read data from it (not suiteable for applications with timing issues, but for all others)
socket << "my nice data"; and be happy
Additionally will add stuff like OnSent OnReceived OnTimeout as Callbacks sound cool! May you have a speedy success!
