But I found another bug. If a create a menu with a caption containing the accessor key multiple times (for example "Zoom &Out"), when I press Alt the first of that character will be highlighted (as if I had "Z&oom Out"). This is a minor detail but things like this shouldn't be ignored.

Actually, nobody cares about explicitly defining '&' keys - let U++ runtime generate them for you... and perhaps do it manually in cases when you do not like automatic assignment. You can also assign only some and let U++ do the rest.
