Well, reading the forum I know that it's possible to get libraries from packages creating a dummy executable and grabbing them from output but... I think it's quite cumbersome and not professional way. I'm working with a very big library that is unmanageable as package (all things get too slow) and I had to resort to Codeblocks to build it as a library.... Not a nice thing, more because codeblocks has no (easy) way to make portable projects as theide.
It would be much easier to make a package in theide with libraries as output, both for win and for linux.

Ciao
