

---

Subject: Re: Linux release coobook

Posted by mirek on Wed, 30 Jan 2008 21:40:13 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

mdelfede wrote on Wed, 30 January 2008 14:02luzr wrote on Wed, 30 January 2008

19:41Actually, considering LSB, I think there is a new standard for desktop linux nowadays... It is called Ubuntu.

Well, I agree that's the best distro available today, but you can't call it a standard. There are many RH and Novell users.

I don't know which part of all linux users has ubuntu... do you ?

Max

That is not the end of story. There are many derivative distros of Ubuntu, with compatible .debs, reusing Ubuntu's repository.

Sure, same can be said for RH/Novell, but these are mostly server variant copies...

Mirek

---