Well, I'm trying right now... Hope it'll go better than in your case
OTOH, I'll upgrade first the 64 bit version, so I'll have the old working 32 bit in case of problems.

EDIT :

Well, what must I say ? The upgrade where perfect, so far I've tested 50% of stuffs and all it's ok.
Hardware was 100% ok, the only message that appeared was something about sensor applet (the one that monitors cpu and gpu temperature), in 7.10 was incomplete (just cpu temperature) and installed by hand, 8.04 brought the complete one (gpu temperature too) and told me that previous was incompatible. That's all !

The upgrade was even smoother than from 7.04 to 7.10, far less questions asked during process (well, just 1 of it, if I wanted to keep samba configs or replace it).
If you think that I'm using an HP9695 notebook (on which I had to fiddle many hardware stuffs to get 7.10 completely working), that's an incredible result.... Thanx ubuntu again !
