Well for one thing, the current system works pretty well, bugs are rare get fixed and the forum allows a nice discussion when necessary. But sometimes some bugs or more often wishes of different users do not generate any change in U++, and can get forgotten. For such cases it would be nice to have a common interface. And it would also be useful as a change log. But even right now, there are some txt files which are used to keep track of issues, but I believe only Mirek and maybe another 1-2 people edit them.
