I could do some rpms. I have some linuxes on a vbox, so starting it up and running a script to generate the rpm wouldn't be any problem about 2 times a month.

The problem with rpms is that they are not very portable between distros, so we have to pick some popular distros like Suse and Fedora and stick with the last stable version.