Ehm, maybe one thing makes deployment relatively easy, at least for me: There are virtually no other files that have to be deployed than .exe

BTW, in my glorious municipal agenda project, I have now "minimal development roundtrip" about 10 minutes - from specification of new feature to deployment of updated application. Of course, some features take longer (e.g. adding a new type of report takes me usually 30 - 60 minutes, new type of search about 20 minutes etc..). Anyway, sometimes I develop and deploy new versions of 5 applications in 2 hours, including time spent with users to specify requests

Anyway, secret weapon to this is SelfUpdate. Very simple but saves a lot of time.

Also, maybe you can you ".post" link steps to do something....
