

---

Subject: Re: Does the provided upp.spec works for you and on which distro?

Posted by cbpporter on Mon, 01 Sep 2008 08:22:28 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Yes, it seems that using Factory is not that easy. Another solution would be Packman, which is the "official" unofficial third party repository. Also it is AFAIK the only general package repository except the official ones. In suse 11, it even appears in the list of common Software Repositories, so you don't even have to manually enter the address to enable it.

Unfortunately, if you want to contribute a package you have to mail them. If you don't want to mess around with such a system, I could contact them and get login info for you.

Also, maybe someone can find out how to contribute to Ubuntu repository. I believe the one that could accept third party packages is called "Universe".

---