Cpp an .h file names policy (all lower case for better portability): No need for policy, our programmers are used to current file names.

BTW, out of curiosity, I have decided to check your claim about every FOSS project following lowercase policy to avoid cross-platform problems.

So, here is the list of those that do not (you can probably find more):

- Mozilla Firefox
- fltk
- Fox toolkit

I guess at least Firefox makes your point completely moot
