Subject: Re: Porting (Mac OS X) and "reference application" idea
Posted by bytefield on Tue, 16 Sep 2008 09:44:52 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

luzr wroteIn my country, there is IMO much more Linux related programming jobs than MacOS programming jobs. Basically, any ISP needs Linux programmers. Who needs OSX coders?
That's happen also in my country and I guess all around the world, IMO LAMP(Linux+Apache+MySQL+Php) is one of the best solutions for server side applications, because it's cheap and opened.

When i was talking about the MacOS as a second market after Windows i was thinking that Linux market side want mostly open-source programs and just the best oss get sales in Linux market(maybe not source or program sales but support sales). BTW, have someone from here made a commercial application for Linux and/or open-source/closed-source in the same time?