I am afraid this will not satisfy the critics. It is still just an example supporting only two control types, and very limited set of properties. And you are unable to place the controls to horizontal or vertical groups of controls. The window width, and control sizes are hardcoded. It shows that dynamic generation can be done from client code, but only if the client goes and implements all of it - it's not a feature ready to be used. (Situation is simmilar with HtmlBrowser control)
