When I first tried IDE Ultimate + +. I saw a lot of similarities with the Clarion.

In Clarion just used this approach to display the huge tables (but not huge, too), when the client receives from the server only lines that appear on the screen at the moment.

Of course it is difficult to program, but it works quite quickly.

IMO, the problem is that there is no generic way how to create random access cursor to all supported RDMBs... AFAIK.

OTOH, maybe this is something to investigate.
