Generally speaking, I want the IDE to look more attractive as IDE for non U++ users. What do you think?

My idea of attractive is not really about being colorful and kind of design rich like VC++'s "dockable panels" for instance. but something functional.

I am not sure if my words are very clear but I believe that an attractive UI is the one that is functional and provides easy to use macros. Well, I hope that may help anyway for your general brainstorming.

Who was talking about beeing attractive as beeing colorful ?

The talk was: what features are needed for non U++ users (pure C++ etc.). Can you list any?
