The ".data" segment is 13% of the ".text" segment. Not all ".data" is RTTI but still ...
And for some reason it requires 55% of ".text"'s size at run-time.

Any way, small device guys always compile with RTTI disabled.

IMO, most of ".data" is .iml...

Mirek

IMO, that should go in ".rdata" because it is read-only.
I think it's not read-only because you can modify the content of an .iml file, replacing an image from Iml class with your own image.
