cp uppsrc/ide.out ./theide

and put

cp ./theide ~/theide

to the doinstall?

Yes, I would vote for that since I think this belongs to the install step.
For the FreeBSD port I only want to run the 'domake' script without automatically copying the program to the user's home.
Instead U++ assemblies are installed to /usr/local/share/upp and theide is installed to /usr/local/bin.
