So either I do not understand C++ exceptions well, or something is wrong with compiler? Perhaps it is not possible to catch exception over C code? (That would be pity, because I have switched from setjmp as it does not work in Win64...)

IIRC, C exceptions are handled quite differently than c++ ones, with __try and __exception blocks (I don't remember if names are exactly this...). I think you should enclose C code on a C exception, using c++ one won't work.
