Subject: Re: is there U++ coding style reference?
Posted by kohait00 on Tue, 03 Aug 2010 15:34:19 GMT

this was a simple example though...there were more complex.
generally smaller < bigger is right. but in terms of semantical thinking it's sometimes not so good to follow it.

in upper case, semantical meaning was 'if count of a vector is at most 2, then...' where the focus or starting point is the count (and not the number 2), which should go first, because one thinks of count first..

offtopic, you're right