Dockable toolbars is a great idea; I asked for it several times (in spite of my short existence in U++). It gives an application a professional feature and look. This is particularly true for CAD applications.

Remark: Just in case this is of your interest, I am currently developing an engineering calculation application, which contains a CAD sub-application, by using OpenGL. Actually it is a general purpose Finite Element Analysis tool.

The idea is to prepare a commercial application (although my experience is limited I am a hardworker).

Anybody interested, please contact the undersigned.
