

---

Subject: Re: smtp problem

Posted by Mindtraveller on Sat, 11 Sep 2010 15:14:58 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Servers usually accept login which is equal to "FROM:" record because of their internal options. It is done to fight spam and phishing. For example, one may send someone email and make FROM: admin@google.com with request to change user's password on some links which redirects to his deface/phishing resource. To prevent it, those mail servers which are well configured, prevent you from using names different from your login.

---