Uhmmmm... well, I guess the 2 most annoying points are solved now.

Now functions returning values are allowed and also declarations inside function body.

Ciao

Max

Edit: btw, if somebody just wonders why the

```
if(!__decrypted)
    goto __end;
```

Is needed (goto is never taken), that's because if not there the optimizing GCC would skip the end marker assembly code, thinking it never gets executed.