It looks ok, at least I didn't see any mistakes. You will see the changes on the web tomorrow morning. To get rid of the modified status (in most svn clients) you have to update after committing. And one little thing for next time: Please try to make the log message look like "packagename: What changed" or ".packagename: Something not very important changed". It makes the logs easier to read, thanks.

ok, I'm not used to having to update after committing. Regarding the package name - sure I'll do that. What does a leading * mean?
