Well, the refactoring of Image is closing to the end as I have finally succeded in mastering XRender and thus creating linux implementation.... Now last thing to (temporarily) fix is IconDes in TheIDE which heavily uses PixelArray... After that point, Draw package will be upgraded, inevitably causing problems for some time....

Which means, perhaps we should make one "official" release before that happens. While there were no revolutionary things since 602, there well some important bugfixes etc (and Hydra).

I believe recent dev release was quite stable, so what about making this week release a "RC", then, if things go well, make it 605?
