Well I haven't managed to follow what the idea of the ultimate book is at all but I think U++ needs a proper/traditional help facility organized along the lines of what I wrote here
<http://www.ultimatepp.org/forum/index.php?t=msg&th=4428&start=0>

I think there should be a left hand pane with a tree showing the contents and the right hand pane with the text. Possibly even a standalone app or a separate window so you can view code and the help at the same time if you want.

Do you think this is viable?

I seem to remember there was some kind of problem with doing this so I'll have to review that thread and see if I can remember what it was.
