
Subject: Re: MediaPlayer is out
Posted by koldo on Wed, 05 Jan 2011 09:06:43 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Hello Honza

This post is about MediaPlayer. If you want to do other things please open a new post.

I do not understand you: I informed many months ago about this project and its advance. I

One week ago we chatted in ICQ about it and I opened the package to you, to do a join effort. Now you break your word and do it by yourself without any previous comment. For me it is dishonest, it is a backstab.

It is true anybody can take, lets say, all U++ project and open tomorrow a new project in Sourceforge, a new web page, change a few things including the name and logo, and begin a new project. It is legal. The license permits it. It is called fork. But if there is no previous provocation and if the original project has been fair and all project contributors have had opportunities proportional to their effort, to open a fork is not fair.

For sure I am of the old school. But if U++ project acts this way I do not want to be here.
