Also don't forget about the removal of tab before calling callback. Or did I miss something and don't understand how it should work?

From a quick look into source I would say it's wrong on many places, not just the one I proposed in the patch.

edit: the current SVN looks immune to crash (although I have no idea how you did that with that change you committed .. and I'm not going to look, have plenty of own work ... but it looks completely unrelated on first sight).
