Subject: Re: U++ development: Two philosophies
Posted by dolik.rce on Tue, 18 Jan 2011 19:44:07 GMT

koldo wrote on Tue, 18 January 2011 09:26Hello all

I think maybe I have been somewhat excessive in the presentation.

Honza is a great person and, after two years and a half of contact, I have no doubt that absolutely everything he does, he does it selflessly and with the best intentions. And this is not rhetorical. I say it sincerely.

After the initial anger came the reflection: why this can happen.
After that comes learning, what we can learn.
And after that the action has to come.
Hi Koldo

I took no offense, don't worry. Since the beginning I believed it was just a mere misunderstanding, because I know you are such a good person. I am really glad to hear you are not angry with me anymore.

And maybe, in some way, it was all a good thing - it started the debate about issue tracking and better coordination which can only help the U++ project and community. In Czech there is a proverb that says "everything evil is good for something". I hope that this is the case

Best regards,
Honza