In firefox I'm using auto random coloring, although you can also assign manually. For me it works, I don't use those colors to recognize particular tab, just it makes easy to distinguish tabs and relax my eyes. With the number of source files I'm using it would be almost impossible to orientate by custom colors, and it would be tedious to assign them. (just checked my current project has 134 files already in IDE)

I can add auto coloring tabs. It's very easy so why not One question? With many files open how do you find this small tab scrollbar. Is it convenient for you or you prefer multi line tabs?
