No, but I see no reason. Could you get testing package posted?

Mirek

I can of course...
Just now I removed my modifications to reproduce the anomalous behaviour before to post the package... and it decided to work as it should do!
Maybe it was afraid of you?
I can assure that before to signal it I tried many times. Well, in future I'll freeze the package with the problem and start to work with another one.
So I think now make no sense to post it but if you think can be useful just tell me.
