1.When adding a package to the project should open a new window and re-scan all packages information, by this way the efficiency is too low. Very often I already know the name of the package to be added, can it add an input window to enter the package name directly?Look like to add a package by modify the .upp file directly.

2.Only one by one remove multiple files from a project.No batch operations.

3.Sometimes clicking on a file only want to select it but not want to open it, theide open that file every time when clicked.Can it only open the file by double-click?This is annoying when someone want to remove or move multiple files.

4.Sometimes the project's "output mode" settings will be lost for unknown reasons, why not save the settings in the .upp file?
