Yes, you're right : it's understandable. Just unusual and comfusing for some experienced programmers.

And because it's understandable, it's very possible to be used by C/C++ beginners

Upp should be used especially by beginners because it is simple and elegant.

I personally prefer not to put labels like "experienced" or "not experienced" on developers because there are thousands areas of expertise in software development and in C++ in particular. Being familiar with STL and MFC doesn't make one experienced in other areas.
