Quote:Well, I'm thinking a bit more of a modular menu system for apps, and I guess Docking wouldn't be enough for it.
I think I'll drop some lines about it in some month... I need it anyways for my new app.

What I think would be great is a sort of xml-driven menu/toolbar system, with toolbars freely dockable on each corners of top window, and an user menu/toolbar editor embedded in applications.
Items could then send a String/Value/Number to listening handlers in applications.
That one would allow customization of menu system by end user, which is almost a must in cad applications (many, many commands and usually a small set that a user want to have handy).

Javier