Subject: Re: how to create .tppi and .i files (and a working .tpp in a RichTextView)
Posted by BioBytes on Fri, 02 Dec 2011 20:52:54 GMT

Hi,

It is not necessay a lack of documentation that could impede new users coming to U++ but where to find the information in tpp or forum. However U++ is definitively a great IDE more innovative and faster than wxWidgets I used from 2008 to 2011 before returning to U++ which is now close to maturity.

So it is crucial that more experienced users still keep on helping newbies and also others (like me) through the forum. U++ community is a strength that should be preserved.

Documentation is on the way (see dolik and some other U++ "gurus" efforts) but it is a tough work.

I would say that PromptOK does not seem strange to me and comes rapidly familiar with time. Not more than the sizers in wxWidgets indeed.

Have all a nice week-end

Biobytes