Yes, the defaults are weird I think there is historical reason since when it was running directly on the server, ages ago

Have a look in the uppweb.xml file (should be in your home directory). The targetdir option specifies the output directory for web pages (a lot of html files and few pngs). You can also edit the paths in here and run the uppweb.exe again, it will read it and use the values.

Here is my uppweb.xml for reference:
uppweb.xml<?xml version="1.0" encoding="UTF-8" standalone="yes" ?>
<!DOCTYPE uppweb>
<uppweb>
	<rootdir>/home/h/upp-production</rootdir>
	<targetdir>/home/h/uppweb/target</targetdir>
	<diffdir>/home/h/uppweb/diff</diffdir>
	<pdfdir>/home/h/uppweb/pdf</pdfdir>
	<ftpUpload value="0"/>
	<outPdf value="0"/>
	<doSvn value="0"/>
</uppweb>
So I can open 'file:///home/h/uppweb/target/index.html' in any browser and see the generated site. You just have to substitute the path.
