I got my first app working on Linux then added to it at work on windows and now I am having trouble getting the new version to work on linux. I added a library and I am getting a linker error or errors. How do you add an external library in Linux.

I added the include and lib path in setup/build Methods and have libzmq in the package organizer without the when field since it is used in both.

But linux does not need or have .lib files so how does this work in Linux?
