I couldn't get a new nightly debian package yet, so I couldn't try. Hopefully the debian package will be updated soon. Looking into the SVN commit I think it could change some behavior I have problems with.

Special thanks for explaining how all this works internally. This helps a lot to understand what is happening.

Yes, I always checked the size of the document by looking into the properties of the document, not the visual appearance alone.

I am now waiting for the new nightly package to arrive. Should this take too long I might use the SVN version for testing. That debian package is preferred though..

Again, thank you very much!

Kind regards,

Give svn a thought. In the end, it is the most convenient way to keep yourself in sync with development.
