
Subject: Re: [BUG] Memory leak in MySql package
Posted by Alboni on Thu, 23 May 2013 11:17:09 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

MySql is a separate program (unlike SQLite). It is not closed when the application program that uses it closes. So this will not damage the databasefile, but I can imagine that it can take longer for MySql to register that the client app is gone wich might be a problem if there is a maximum number of connections allowed etc. etc. Anyway can't figure out a reason not to do the closing call.
