A small test case is attached.

Actually, the problem is that you can have both a submenu and a checkbox, but you cannot control checkbox in this case because there is only one callback, and it can be called even if you do not click on menu (just hold your mouse pointer over this menu item, click somewhere outside of menu, and open "File" menu again).

IMHO, because there is no way to control state of checkbox in this case, it should be displayed as disabled.

Just my 2 cents.
