Thanks Honza for your reply,

This time I only just found out that my method didn't add the display to the correct row yet because the row wasn't added yet. That did the job. However, I have an ArrayCtrl in a tabwindow too. The same problem occurred and I worked around it by refreshing the row count whenever the tabwindow is set active. (TabCtrl::WhenSet).

I will let you know if I run into this problem again.

Thanks!
