Users of UPP are mostly programmers / software engineers. We are normally good at engineering, but generally we are not good at selling. If one's application has can be used by others, has an easy to use graphical interface and is given the finishing touches such as an online help or a manual, then it should be fit to sell.

Does anyone actually sell their own works, if so what marketing schemes work?

Does anyone know of any resellers that are willing to resell application written with U++?
