Thank You Mirek!!

I will review your example this morning.

My project (health system monitor)will have a main window open continuously during operation -- with a real-time display. The other windows are: 1. Startup splash screen with trademark logo. 2. Print reports -- the report window will contain a calendar date selector, report type selector, numerous criteria selectors. 3. Password-protected management window with a busy 4-5 tabbed control: input point properties, recipients, email settings, paging settings, serial communication settings, and more. 4. A software license validation window -- used on first time run.
