

---

Subject: Re: why the ctrl doesn't have HWND?

Posted by Lance on Thu, 05 May 2016 01:30:22 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

They don't have one. They use related top window's device context to draw themselves.

In your case you may want to use a popup window to fake the Ctrl. A popup is a top level window and has its own HWND. Override the ctrl's layout virtual function (maybe some more to have the popup move/resize with the Ctrl)...

---