I understand but we shouldn't. This is a TrueOS issue. What can be done is reporting that pkg-config for gtk doesn't give the right library name for freetype and add that freetype libraries use wrong names.
Other than that, we shouldn't interfere. Tomorrow, this will certainly be fixed and we would have to change it again and again.