Well, I'll get back to you when I get to install the latest VS. This will take at least one month. I have two post release bi-weekly updates to prepare so I have no time to install new VS. When I'll install I'll also test auto-detecting it.

Until then, as Mirek said, we might get official support for auto-detection. If you managed to get it to work with that BM file it means that the process is similar to the rest of MSC so auto-detection should be easy.
