Hi Guys,

I just rebuilt my machine and installed the following version of U++, upp-x11-src-11873.

Right clicking on the editor area when applying a single right click, the context menu appears and waits around until one makes a selection, or a selection outside of the menu.

When applying a single right mouse click on the Layout Editor, or the package and file frames on the left hand side of the, TheIde, the context menu flashes, with the top most menu option being selected. In order to get the context menu to display, the right mouse button must continue to be held down, in which case one can make a selection of any menu option. This is never been experienced before. What gives? Is any one else experiencing this?

Peter
