(Im using svn 12781)

word-wrapping code-lines: this happen consistently when I have a long line and type beyond column 96/7 then the input-point suddenly jump to an indented new line below navigator: I agree it must be available, but to the left of the editor as per the original default, when it is to the right I find it not helpful/interferes with my visual feel for the code and I always change it back to the middle/left of the editor, which is what I'm saying should remain the default location rescan file while editing: this is maybe just part of the start-up process of theide, and maybe I'm too quick into editing for it to have finished scanning all sources used; after a project is open a while this becomes less of an issue, I have not timed it, so maybe I should just be patient for the few minutes it takes theide to set itself up - I'll monitor it and report if it persists

"Be happy ... "
"Don't worry ..."
I am, thx! :)
