I wrote the following on github: https://github.com/slashmais/dbsqlite3 that I use for all my data, maybe you find something useful. This works very well for me for a while now.

Thank you for the reply.
I saw you did something interesting for sqlite3. I'll use something in future.
My problem now is different. I am working with two db simultaneously: sqlite3 and mysql. Each of them has its own .sch file. The problem is how to declare and use them without mix up the code.

Thanks,
Luigi
