IMHO, we need an option for umk. Something like "target platform", "-t", I guess. Possible values should be "windows", "linux", "mac", "native", e.t.c.
Hi,

This idea sounds very interesting. Especially if this could be possible to extend to TheIDE on Windows. Then it would be possible to build with CLANG on Windows directly for Raspberry Pi. This would make developing for RPi so much more convenient!

Best regards,

Tom
